County battles nasty bug

IAN MCINROY
Innisfil Examiner

One of the worst invasive alien forest pests ever to be introduced to North America is here in Simcoe County.

The emerald ash borer (EAB) has killed or infested — by some reports — as many as 100 million ash trees since it was first detected in Michigan and southwestern Ontario in 2002.

It has now been confirmed to be in the Bradford West Gwillimbury part of the county and is moving north.

According to county forester Graeme Davis, all ash species are considered to be susceptible, except the mountain ash which is a different species.

"The anticipated time frame for the rate of spread throughout Simcoe County is unknown, although it is a reasonable assumption that it is probably already in other areas, but not yet confirmed," he said.

"It is also not known how quickly it may spread through our more rural and natural areas where ash is generally a minor component of the hardwood forests in this area."

To find out more about how quickly the EAB is spreading, county employees are setting 60 traps to be installed in strategic locations throughout the region, including within the cities of Barrie and Orillia, beginning in late May.

Will Cox, of the Simcoe County Forestry Department, sets sticky traps with summer student Shay Yaskovitch as the two track the migration of the emerald ash borer during a visit to Innisfil Beach Park earlier this week.

county roads estimates an average of nine ash trees per one kilometre of roadway, or approximately 7,000 ash trees, although that figure varies significantly by road and township.

"Based upon the very preliminary survey, the removal of potentially hazardous ash trees along county roads is estimated at $700,000," Davis said. "The county forests have been managed in anticipation of the arrival of EAB for several years by removing a higher percentage of ash than would otherwise be the case in our normal thinning operations."

"This will continue to be accomplished as part of our normal operations."

Because ash has been a popular landscaping variety of tree, it is often over-represented in more urban areas, Davis said, adding the cost for hazardous tree removals in local municipalities can be much higher.

The highly visible green, triangular, sticky traps will remain in place until August 2014.

Residents finding the traps are asked to leave them untouched and in their current location, and are also reminded to help reduce the spread of the EAB and other invasive species by buying and burning firewood locally.

"The traps will be checked in July and again in August. It is imperative that they remain undisturbed to enable the monitoring to take place," Davis said. "The most important message to residents is not to move firewood any substantial distance."

He said an average of 10% of the trees in the county's natural woodlots are ash and a very preliminary sampling conducted along sections of

Toronto police to review SSP investigation into Brandon Majewski's death

QMI STAFF

(STAFF) – Toronto police will now review the investigation into the 2012 death of an Innisfil teenager who was hit and killed by a vehicle while riding his bike.

Brandon Majewski, 17, died after he was struck while riding his bicycle with his two friends on a dark stretch of Innisfil Beach Road around 1:30 a.m. on Oct. 28, 2012.

The driver of the vehicle that hit him, 42-year-old Sharlene Simon, was not charged in connection with the fatal crash.

South Simcoe police say the investigative file for this incident has been turned over to Toronto police traffic services for review, which is expected to take as long as two months to complete.

"The review will be comprehensive. The conclusion will be shared," said South Simcoe Police Chief Rick Beazley. "The Toronto Police Service (is) very experienced with investigating serious motor vehicle collisions involving both pedestrians and civilians."

Beazley has acknowledged there have been concerns from the community about how South Simcoe police handled the investigation into the fatal crash.

He announced earlier this month that an outside police agency would review that investigation.

South Simcoe police officials have said their own internal review of the crash investigation indicate that 'standard procedures' were followed, including the on-scene investigation, visibility testing, mechanical testing of the vehicle, forensic scene mapping, sobriety tests and interviews with the driver and independent witnesses.

On the morning of Oct. 28, 2012, police say a roadside screening device was used at the scene and alcohol was ruled out as a factor in the collision.

A collision reconstructionist's report was also completed for the provincial prosecutor to determine whether criminal charges should be laid.

South Simcoe police said they hope the Toronto police review of the investigation will resolve any questions regarding South Simcoe police's handling of this matter.

But a complaint was received by the Office of the Independent Police Review Director (OIPRD) regarding the actions of the investigating officers.

OIPRD is an independent, arms-length civilian agency that falls under the Ontario Ministry of the Attorney General. Its role is to ensure public complaints are dealt with in a fair, transparent, effective and efficient manner.

OIPRD reviewed a professional standards report and determined no further action was required.

Subsequently, South Simcoe police's professional standards branch sent a letter to the complainant concluding there was no misconduct on the part of officers.

"This collision was a terrible blow to several families and to our community as a whole," the South Simcoe police statement said.

"We all have an interest in applying its lessons, in an effort to save people from physical harm, personal loss and emotional grief."

Brandon Majewski and his two friends were struck from behind as they road their bicycles side-by-side on Innisfil Beach Road at 1:30 a.m. on Oct. 28, 2012.

Rising energy costs hard to swallow

Inflation hasn't been a significant issue in Canada for 30 years, but on Friday Statistics Canada reported that its consumer price index, a device used by the federal agency to track the cost of core purchases, had hit an annual rate of 2% for the first time in two years.

The chief culprit was energy costs, particularly in Ontario, where both electricity and natural gas prices have jumped this year.

But food prices were also higher, as were some other purchases. The news from Stats Canada was important because it provided a possible signal to the Bank of Canada for its trend-setting borrowing rates.

But the data is also deceptive, because it buried the significance of energy costs and their relationship to average Canadian families, particularly those in Ontario who are struggling to deal with skyrocketing utility bills.

Indeed, natural gas prices in Ontario rose by a breathtaking 26% in April, while the cost of gasoline was up 6.6% over the year. Electricity prices were up 4.6%.

Politicians in this provincial election can talk about a lot of issues, but the cost of keeping your home warm in the winter, cool in the summer, and your vehicle's tank filled with fuel, are issues that resonate with voters, especially those who are unemployed, under-employed, or being paid a salary or wage that hasn't been raised in recent years.

The annual inflation rate last month may have been 2%, but it was much, much more for many of the items that Canadian families find necessary to purchase and consume.

And energy has become a big ticket item.

The rising rates for energy are reminiscent of a time 30 and 35 years ago when such increases were routine, and when the annual inflation rate in Canada wasn't 2%, but more like 10% or 11%. Such rising prices had a devastating impact on the economy, especially since bank rates were in the double digits.

There's little fear of that happening anytime soon in Canada. Indeed, the Bank of Canada believes that a 2% rate of inflation is normal and expected.

But just as homeowners had a difficult time 30 years ago keeping a roof over their head with bank rates of 14% and 15%, homeowners today are having an equally difficult time digesting the impact of rising energy prices.

It might be the single biggest issue in this election campaign.

Honouring best in local food

BRITTANY DONER-GILROY
Special to the Examiner

The Food Partners Alliance of Simcoe County is hoping for an abundant crop of nominees for its second annual Charter Champion Awards. The Awards acknowledge individuals, businesses and organizations in the community who are working towards local food security.

"There is a lot of innovative and exciting work being done throughout the County to produce, protect, and promote local food and agriculture," said Simcoe County Warden Cal Patterson. "The Charter Champion Awards provide a great opportunity to encourage and celebrate this work."

The Food Partners Alliance of Simcoe County is accepting nominations until May 31, 2014. The Charter Champion Awards occur on July 12, 2014 and highlight 14 categories, which include: Best Community Garden; Community Appreciation Award for Work Improving Equal Access; Buy Local Champion; Best Event Celebrating Culture and Local Food; Best Local Food Retailer; Best Local Food Restaurant/Caterer; Community Appreciation Award to Thank a Friendly Local Farmer; Best Agricultural Club or Association; Young Farmer's Award; Youth Farmer's Award; Best Environmental Champion Individual; Best Environmental Champion Organization; Best School Program; and Best Community-Based Food-Skills Development Program.

Last year the FPA received a total of 55 nominations; however, with many new food and agriculture related initiatives sprouting up county-wide, such as new farmers' markets and community gardens, food-skills programs, gleaning projects and more, the FPA is hoping to double that number.

"While we are only able to award a small group of Champions a year, we acknowledge and celebrate the work of all the nominees," said Hemsted. "The more nominees, the better."

To view a list of last year's nominees and award recipients, or to nominate an individual, business, or organization for a Charter Champion Award, visit fpa.simcoe.ca.

Funding for this project was provided by the County of Simcoe, Simcoe Muskoka District Health Unit, and the Government of Ontario.

Tim Hudak's job plan doesn't make sense

Ontario Progressive Conservative leader Tim Hudak's job creation/destruction plan is a perilous marketing gimmick with little or no backing from knowledgeable economists.

It is regressive, divisive, punitive and designed to appeal to those who believe the myth that people who earn their wage from the public purse are undeserving of adequate compensation for their skills, specialized training and service to the public. Does this absurd proposal to create a million jobs by cutting 100,000 jobs mean that it takes 10 private sector workers to do the work of one public service worker? Does Mr. Hudak want to create jobs or kill jobs?

It sounds like a plan to redistribute wealth by creating a displaced workforce that in desperation will have no choice but to work in the private sector at a lesser wage and few benefits, giving businesses more profit.

It has been proven and protested that companies don't reinvest these profits into creating more jobs, but rather the benefits go to the shareholders and investors. Talk of creating a million jobs is a huge exaggeration. Statistics Canada indicates that there are 561,300 people in Ontario who need jobs - not a million. Instead of promoting acrimony between public and private sector interests, we need a government that realizes that both are necessary for the well-being of the other. Businesses need good roads, police and fire protection, well-educated employees, social services of all kinds for their families and employees, effective daycare for their workers, safe drinking water, reliable sources of energy, environmental protection, health care and they need the purchasing power of a well-paid public sector.

The private sector provides things, but the public sector provides the services that ultimately determine our quality of life. It is just as ridiculous to believe that 100,000 workers can be cut from the public sector without it having a negative effect on our lives as it is to think that a business can operate without customers or clients. The 100,000 pink slips will grow nothing but heartache and deprivation.

Make sure your vote on June 12 moves us forward; not back to the dark days of the (former Ontario premier Mike) Harris regime, when he too waged war on the poor, the vulnerable and the public service.

Majewski was killed instantly when his head and body made contact with the vehicle and he was thrown over the roof.

One of his friends, Richard McLean, then 16, suffered serious injuries, including a broken pelvis. Another friend Jake Roberts, then 16, received only scratches.

Simon has hired a lawyer to sue the dead boy's family for the emotional trauma caused by his death.

Her lawyer, Michael Ellis, has said when Simon learned she was facing a $900,000 claim from Brandon's family and a $1.4-million claim by the other victim, she hired a lawyer and launched a separate action against all three boys, their families and Simcoe County.

Simon's lawsuit, filed with the courts, claims the teens were riding too fast and 'were incompetent bicyclists lacking in reasonable care, skill, ability and training.'

Simon and her husband, who followed in a separate vehicle, had just left Dave and Busters, a restaurant and games bar.

Ellis has also said his client has been wracked with guilt, suffers from post-traumatic stress and is unable to work.

None of the allegations have been proven in court.

Ronin hangin' it up

MIRIAM KING

BRADFORD — For eight of his nine years, Ronin has been a police services dog with the South Simcoe Police Service, partnered with handler Const. Matt Tomlin.

Ronin is now retired, and on Monday, the K-9 team received special recognition for their years of service during the Bradford West Gwillimbury-Innisfil Police Services Board meeting held at the South Division in Bradford.

That it's been a stellar eight years was clear: over the course of his career, Ronin was involved in 72 criminal apprehensions and the recovery of hundreds of thousands of dollars in illicit drugs.

Perhaps most importantly, was the 2010 tracking and successful location of a person with mental challenges, who had wandered off in the middle of winter. The person was found in time.

The outcome could have been a tragedy without Ronin's canine cunning.

In retirement, Ronin will live with Tomlin and his family, although not exactly as a family pet.

"He'll always be a working dog," Tomlin explained, as Ronin chewed on a toy. "He's adjusting well to retirement. He's got a great personality, very social."

In all, said Tomlin, "It's been a great eight years. Very exciting, very enjoyable, very rewarding."

Tomlin continues to serve with South Simcoe police, but not as a canine handler. Instead, he has been taking the lead on a new program, to develop a Peer Support Team that will provide mental health resources to officers.

County battling many other invasive species

City of Barrie officials are in the midst of their plan to deal with 3,000 ash trees — including marshall's seedless ash, white ash, summit ash, patmore ash, fall gold ash, autumn purple ash and green ash — on city boulevards and in parks, according to urban forester Kevin Rankin.

In 2007, the city implemented a moratorium on planting ash trees on public lands and recommended they be omitted from all landscaping plans.

Monitoring of EAB was being conducted by the Canadian Food Inspection Agency up to 2013 until it was confirmed in Simcoe County. Now the county has assumed the monitoring role to provide information to local municipalities, other agencies, and landowners to enable better decisions to be made on management options.

Davis said the direct cost for the monitoring program totals $6,500.

The county's strategy to manage the effects of EAB includes monitoring, inventory, communications and outreach, and planned tree removals.

The emerald ash borer is not the only invasive species the county is dealing with.

"Invasive species come in many varieties. They are any plant, animal, or other organism which becomes established in an area outside of their natural range," Davis said. "Because they don't have natural predators or control agents in their new environment, many can adapt and spread quickly, and some cause significant damage to natural or agricultural areas by competing with or injuring native species, agricultural crops or horticultural species."

"Invasive pathogens have impacted our forests with the continuing loss of diversity. Elm, butternut, and beech have all been severely impacted. We are also spending an increasing amount of time and resources controlling several very invasive plants such as garlic mustard, dog-strangling vine and buckthorn."

To learn more about EAB and other invasive species — and what you can do to minimize their spread — visit the Canadian Food and Inspection Agency's website at www.inspection.gc.ca

Examples of invasive species include:

- Fish: asian carp, round goby, sea lamprey
- Aquatic plants: european water chestnut, hydrilla
- Invertebrates: zebra mussels, rusty crayfish
- Insects: asian long-horned beetle, gypsy moth, emerald ash borer
- Pathogens: dutch elm disease, beech bark disease, butternut canker
- Terrestrial plants: purple loosestrife, garlic mustard, European buckthorn

Alcona's Biggest Yard Sale

MIRIAM KING

The eighth annual 'Alcona's Biggest Yard Sale' took place at the Crossroads Plaza in Alcona on Saturday, May 24.

It's a tradition that was begun by the Alcona Business Association, during the urbanization and reconstruction of Innisfil Beach Road, and it had two purposes: to raise funds for streetscaping and benches, on a beautified main street of Alcona, and to bring people downtown, despite the construction.

The construction is long over, the streetscaping has been completed by the town, but the tradition of the yard sale continues.

This year, Alcona's Biggest Yard Sale was a fundraiser for the Innisfil Public Library and its popular 'Fresh Air Flicks' program.

The program shows blockbuster movies outdoors in Innisfil Beach Park during the summer for a great family experience.

WARNING FOR DO-GOODER

INNISFIL — An woman's licence was suspended for three days after vouching for three youths spotted near cottages in Innisfil, Tuesday evening.

South Simcoe police were called around 7 p.m. when a concerned citizen spotted a groups of boys lingering near the cottages.

Officers spoke to the youths, who said the cottages were owned by relatives.

A woman arrived and she confirmed the boys' story to officers, but police noticed the smell of alcohol on her breath and she admitted to drinking before she left home.

She was given a roadside screening test and registered a 'warn'. As a result, the 57-year-old woman lost her licence for three days.

TEEN PUTS VEHICLE IN DITCH

INNISFIL — A teenager who fell asleep at the wheel and drove into a ditch needed town firefighters to remove her from a car Monday morning.

South Simcoe police were called to a rollover at 4:30 a.m. on Big Bay Point Road, east of 20 Sideroad.

Police said its driver had been travelling east on Big Bay Point Road when she fell asleep and ended up in the north-side ditch.

Officers found an 18-year-old female with serious but non-life-threatening injuries.

She was trapped, had to be removed by Innisfil firefighters and was taken to hospital by paramedics. The driver was the car's lone occupant. Big Bay Point Road was closed for about 90 minutes.

Police say charges are pending.

IMPAIRED CHARGE LAID

INNISFIL — A 64-year-old Innisfil man is facing impaired charges and had his vehicle impounded after an officer noticed the man was unsteady on his feet.

According to South Simcoe police, an officer noticed the driver of a vehicle that has just pulled into a plaza on Innisfil Beach Road around midnight last Friday was unsteady on his feet when he got out of the vehicle.

Police say the officer quickly determined the man was impaired after speaking with him and took him to the station where he was charged with impaired driving and having over 80 mgs. of alcohol in his system.

He now has a future court date in June and his vehicle was impounded and driver's licence was suspended.

MAN PUNCHED IN FACE

ALCONA — A man was punched in the face during an argument between neighbours here last Thursday night.

Just after 10 p.m., South Simcoe police were called to the dispute and learned that a verbal argument had turned physical when a punch was thrown.

Police did not say what the dispute was about.

Cast your vote now for the craziest Cozy Chair of Cookstown

MIRIAM KING
Innisfil Examiner

Cookstown's Wing Ding takes place on the first full weekend in June (this year June 7-8) and once again, the public is being invited to vote for 'People's Choice' in the Coziest Chair in Cookstown Competition.

Innisfil residents were asked to take any chair and transform it into a work of art, or a commentary on life in Cookstown, and enter it in the contest for fun and prizes.

Entries began arriving at the Old Library, 19 Queen St., on May 24. They included the "Martian Chair" created by Weston Smith and Kanyon Littlejohn, both 9, out of an old massage chair - complete with lights, breathing apparatus and "space suits" - and the "Throne" created by Roger and Linda Johnson, out of a South Simcoe Theatre prop.

The chairs will be on display until June 8; the public is invited to check out the entries and vote for their favourites.

Also on display at 19 Queen St. for Wing Ding: Art Around the Corners.

The artists who have been participating in the annual Studio Tour, held on Light Up Night, have decided to take a different approach this year. They will no longer hold a 2-day studio tour, but instead plan to paint together, network, set up their own facebook page - and host group art shows at a number of local events, including Wing Ding and the Georgian Bay Steam Show.

"Everybody's really re-energized by this," says artist Christina Luck, whose latest "My Town" series of portraits is on display.

For more information, see www.cookstown.ca

Linda Hobbs with the delightful entry of Roger Johnson, of the South Simcoe Theatre, transformed it into a 'throne' for the Coziest Chair in Cookstown Competition.

Childhood falls and unexplainable health problems

Special to the Innisfil Examiner

Research led by Jessie Garciguire and Karen Adolph published in Introduction to Infant Development, Oxford Press, 2007, showed that 14-month-old toddlers fall an average of 15 times per hour while playing. Fifteen times!

That is not a trivial number especially when you begin to add the number of falls they take during a day, a week, a month or a year. The cumulative impact of these repetitive falls can cause problems in the spine and nervous system that contribute to many unexplainable health problems.

Do the math! Fifteen falls per hour, six hours minimum per day, is approximately 90 falls a day. This equals nearly 700 falls per week, and up to 2,500 falls per month. And while their young bodies are capable of adapting to the environment during their developmental years, these repetitive strains can be overwhelming and cause injuries to the spine and nervous system that affect their health on every level. In addition, these falls can cause abnormal spinal patterns that become lifelong problems and lead to unhealthy aging.

Injuries to a child's spine called vertebral subluxations can result from these falls. They can also be caused by trauma from the birth process. Research out of the University of Colorado by Seth Sharpless, M.D. found that it only takes 10 millimeters of pressure, the weight of a dime, to reduce nerve transmission. While this amount of pressure may seem insignificant, it is enough to wreak havoc within a growing body and cause immediate symptoms, or it may remain symptom-free and go unrecognized for years.

Also, since not all nerve interference is felt as pain and can affect the organs, many unexplainable health problems can result.

The medical profession is well aware of these types of conditions and has termed them "Medically Unknown Symptoms" (MUS). These are conditions for which there are no medical examination findings even though the individual may be suffering from symptoms such as pain, irritable bowel syndrome, non-cardiac chest pain and fibromyalgia (Hatcher, S, Arrol B. Assessment and management of medically unexplained symptoms. BMJ 2008; 336:1124).

In fact, among patients seeking medical care, the prevalence of MUS is in the range of 50 percent, varying from 25 to 75 percent, with pain being the most common symptom (Smith RC, Dwamena FC. Classification and diagnosis of patients with medically unexplained symptoms. J Gen Intern Med 2007; 22:685).

The nervous system controls and coordinates the function of every cell, tissue and organ in the body, and adapts you to your environment. Because of the vast nature of nervous system control, many symptoms related to spinal injuries are overlooked and unexplainable through traditional medical examinations. This can be true with many childhood maladies ranging from ear infections and digestive disturbances to growing pains.

A chiropractic examination can determine whether repetitive falls may be affecting your child's health and development. This important, non-invasive examination can ensure the healthy function of their spine and nervous system, and a healthy future.

A common-sense solution to your child's unexplainable health concerns may be right around the corner. Or, if you want to ensure that your child's spine and nervous system are developing normally in spite of all their falls, this comprehensive spinal examination can give you the security you are looking for.

Either way, explaining the unexplainable may be a phone call away. Don't waste another minute in worry or wonder. To make an appointment for your child, please call Alcona Chiropractic at 705-431-0505.

New system will be 'a bolt step'

The police budget for 2014 included start-up costs of $240,000, and annual operating costs of $120,000.

Chief Beazley acknowledged that the contract will require a 0.88% increase in the Police Budget for 2014, but will still result in a budget that is less than in 2013.

Bradford West Gwillimbury Mayor Doug White said that although he has called for the police services board to hold the line on the budget, he is flexible, and supports "things that improve the service."

He called the switch to PRIDE "a pretty bold step into modern policing technology."

Police Services Board Chair Sharon Villani pointed out that the South Simcoe Police Service is one of the last to embrace a NICHE system.

"I think we're taking a bold step out of the Dark Ages," she said.

The board approved the recommendation of Chief Beazley "subject to successful negotiations."

The system should be in place by the end of the year.

TIRED? Middle-Age Energy Booster

Doctors on the Dr. Oz TV Show said that the most frequent complaint they get is "Being Very Tired", some call it fatigue. They have no energy or interest to do anything. More food is not the answer. Drugs are not the answer either as the Johns Hopkins Medical School puts it: "The fact is, all medicines, whether OTC or prescription, carry some risk". It needs a "key" to rejuvenate your own natural systems that fell asleep. Bell provides that key with: Selenium, spermine and spermidine, which are polyamines found in radishes, cucumbers and oats as well as all human cells. Nothing could be more natural than topping off that supply. There is no risk. The Wayne State University researched these ingredients for years and Bell guarantees your satisfaction. It is all right to be skeptical and for that reason we show a few results below and have hundreds more, if you go on our website under #7 Erosyn, which has exactly the same ingredients. This rejuvenation means that most men and women may have youthful feelings again for their partner. Those who want it can resume their intimate relationship. We supply the proof that it works. If incontinence plays a role: McMaster University says that 65% of middle-aged women suffer with incontinence and this is the main reason why many withdraw from intimacy. This can be overcome within days by drinking the Bell Bladder Control Tea #4b available in the same stores as Middle-Age Energy Booster. No more rushing to the bathroom and no padding or diapers needed anymore. Many people wrote we changed their lives.

York - Simcoe candidates gearing up for election

QMI Agency reporter Miriam King asked all four York Simcoe candidates questions in anticipation of the June 12 provincial election. Their responses are below. The Bradford Board of Trade and the Holland Marsh Growers Association are joining forces to present a provincial all-candidates meeting for the riding of York-Simcoe, on Wednesday, June 4. The meeting will take place at the Bradford & District Community Centre, 125 Simcoe Rd. in Bradford, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. All are welcome to attend and hear the candidates debate the issues.

NDP candidate Laura Bowman: Explain your party's job creation platform.

Ontario's NDP would put in place a job creation tax credit for 10% of the salary of a new hire, if the new hire is trained by the employer, up to $5000; lower the small business tax rate to 3%; and put in place a manufacturing investment tax credit. Ontario's NDP rejects the no-strings-attached corporate tax giveaways favoured by the Liberals and the Conservatives - we need to be thrifty with our tax breaks, and reward real job creators and small businesses.

What would you do to boost and preserve the Agricultural sector?

The Ontario NDP took a leadership role by introducing the Local Food Act during the minority government. Ontario's NDP would stop sprawl from destroying our best farmland by reforming the Ontario Municipal Board and reforming provincial planning policies to recognize agriculture as an economic engine of Ontario. The NDP also supports a more comprehensive approach to water protection that includes rural water users and well users, not just municipal wells.

Ontarians need access to food that is healthy and safe. Farmers markets and distribution channels are important avenues for local food to make it from the farm to the consumer.

Support for economic development in rural Ontario is much-needed, including continued provincial transfer payments to municipalities. The NDP would enhance food literacy, providing more agri-skills training, making it easier for new farmers to get financing and access to farmland, and work with industry to attract processors and distributors to Ontario.

We need to improve property taxation for farmers, so farmland taxes reflect the services provided; the province needs to pay a greater share (75%) of the farm property tax rate.

We also need to reform our broken hydro system, and give breaks to farmers on time of use rates, as well as improve natural gas infrastructure in rural areas. The Ontario NDP would provide Ontario's share of funding to Risk Management programs - and direct funding to research the causes of bee deaths.

How would your party address the issue of rising tuition fees?

Tuition has skyrocketed in the last two decades, and grew 80% under 10 years of Liberal government. University and College are no longer affordable. Ontario's NDP would freeze tuition and provide interest-free student loans to help students finance their post-secondary education.

What would you do to address the issue of gridlock, and ease the commute for residents?

Ontario's NDP understands that our congestion problem is serious. We believe in forward-thinking, cost-effective solutions like transit and active transportation (biking and walking infrastructure) to get cars off the road and free up our road infrastructure for our businesses.

York Region and Simcoe County need to pursue cost-effective, immediate solutions, such as improving intersection and roadway design to improve traffic flow.

Ontario's NDP would provide funding to municipal government for these improvements. We should not spend money on new highways that would expropriate prime farmland until there is a full environmental assessment that demonstrates it is the best option from a cost, protection-of-farmland, and traffic-flow perspective, and that there is no better alternative. We need to build complete communities to relieve congestion in the long term.

What do you see as a key issue in York Simcoe?

We must reform the Ontario Municipal Board to get sprawl under control, so that we can grow our agriculture and tourism industries. We cannot continue to build commuter homes, and expect to address congestion. We need good jobs in the community, and we need affordable housing. We must ensure that healthcare and education are caught up to population growth so that residents have good services. We cannot continue to let developers' agendas control our communities, and cause congestion with while demanding that their developments be subsidized by taxpayers.

Liberal candidate Lorelea Carruthers: Explain your party's job creation platform.

The Liberal Party has a solid record of job creation. We have recovered all of the jobs lost during the global recession and have created over 700,000 net new jobs since 2003. The Liberals would continue to create strong economic conditions by tackling problems like gridlock. We will continue to partner with business and keep taxes low for job creators. Our commitment to economic growth includes a $2.5 billion Jobs and Prosperity Fund to support businesses that are creating jobs. Unlike the Conservatives, we will not risk massive cuts to the business supports that create jobs, and we will not lay off 100,000 civil servants, which would throw our economy into a recession.

What would you do to boost and preserve the agricultural sector?

As Minister of Agriculture and Food, the Premier announced a $400 million fund to help farmers improve their infrastructure and invest, to double the number of jobs in the agri-food sector by 2020. In addition, our Farms Forever Plan was endorsed by the Ontario Farmland Trust because it will protect our prime agricultural land from suburban sprawl. I would also suggest that investing to improve traffic on the 400 series highways and repairing rural roads and bridges will help farmers by making it easier to get products to processing centres or to market. That's why we dedicate $100 million for rural infrastructure alone.

How would your party address the issue of rising tuition fees?

York - Simcoe candidates respond

The Liberals introduced the 30%-off tuition grant to help middle and low-income families afford post-secondary education, and capped OSAP debt so that students can afford to pay back their loans. The Repayment Assistance Program provides a 6-month grace period after graduation before students need to start paying back loans, and then it ties the monthly repayment amount a student is expected to pay directly to their current income, to help make it more affordable.

Where do you stand on Beer and Wine sales in convenience stores?

The Liberal government expanded LCBOs into grocery stores, and now allows Ontario wineries to sell at farmers' markets. That said, this issue doesn't appear to be a huge priority for people in our riding, but I do think it is something worth discussing. We have to consider this with a balanced Green Party candidate Peter Elgie: Explain your party's job creation platform.

The central idea of Green economics is to shift taxes off income tax for people and businesses as it is increased on resources and waste. We are fortunate to be a province that is rich in resources, but presently that wealth is basically being given away. The Green Party knows that small businesses are the foundation of our economy and of local employment that pays living wages. All big businesses were originally small businesses - but small businesses are frustrated with taxes and unacceptable red tape. To immediately help create jobs in York-Simcoe, we will double the Employer Health Tax exemption from $450,000 to $900,000 for businesses with payrolls of less than $5 million. This simple change will double the number of local jobs small businesses can create without being taxed.

The Green Party will immediately shift to buying less expensive hydro power from Quebec, and use the $4 billion in savings over 4 years to provide grants of up to $4000 for you and one million other homeowners to invest in energy conservation. We will also propose legislation requiring local utilities to provide affordable loans, for you to retrofit your home. This will create jobs that can't be "off-shored" in all of our local communities.

What would you do to boost and preserve the Agricultural sector?

York Simcoe is home to some of the best agricultural land in the province. Every day, Ontario is losing 365 acres of irreplaceable farmland. The Green Party is the only party to sign the Food and Water First pledge, and Green MPPs will introduce legislation to permanently protect Ontario's Class 1 Farmland and source water regions. The Green Party will also establish measurable local food purchasing targets for all public institutions; end one-size-fits-all regulations for family farms and local food processors.

How would your party address the issue of rising tuition fees?

Green MPPs will end segregation, and merge our 4 publicly funded school boards. It has been suc-

Progressive Conservative incumbent candidate Julia Munro: Explain your party's job creation platform.

The Progressive Conservative Jobs Creation platform involves integrated transit and a complementary road network, more training for skilled trades, and reductions in red tape and hydro rates. With our plan, job creators will once again be looking at Ontario as a place to do business. They will see the discipline of fiscal planning and, instead of leaving the province as we have seen under the current government, they will want to grow their businesses here. This would directly impact employment in York-Simcoe and the rest of the province.

What would you do to address the issue of gridlock, and ease the commute for residents?

We will deliver all-day, 2-way service GO Trains to Union Station and back up to Barrie. This will help more commuters better access transit to get into the city for their work, rather than driving - taking cars off the road. I also hope the new Bradford bus service will be able to access gas tax dollars, a funding model available to support municipal transit that the Liberal government introduced and made permanent.

What do you see as a key issue in York Simcoe?

I really do think we have to focus on fixing our traffic problem; it affects our health, our environment, and our time with our families. Liberals have an integrated plan to solve this issue across Ontario. We committed $29 Billion in the budget to solving this problem.

cessfully done in Quebec and Newfoundland, and is the best way to fairly respect and preserve the existing systems. The Green Party would use the $1 to $1.6 billion saved by ending quadruplicate services, to put money back into our classrooms. We would also establish a Social Innovation Fund that will provides grants, loans and mentorship to help young entrepreneurs.

What would you do to address the issue of gridlock, and ease the commute for residents?

The Green Party will demand a dedicated transit fund to build new transit and support the operation of existing transit to ease our increasingly unacceptable traffic.. The GPO will work with other parties to implement dedicated revenue tools that are fair and progressive, such as congestion charges, gas taxes and parking fees, to raise $3 billion a year to build and operate transit. Nobody prefers to pay more taxes, but the Green Party believes that when necessary, taxes should be generated from the source of the problem. Generations before us paid their share to build our highways, transit systems, hospitals and energy systems, and we must pay our share to maintain and upgrade them. And ultimately, better public transit leads to less time and traffic, to get where you need to go.

What do you see as a key issue in York Simcoe?

We live in the best of times and places... but we are doing things that jeopardize what we value most and our very survival. There is no more reason to continue to put things we know will harm us, into our air, food and water. You have seen each party govern Ontario over the past 3 decades; if you want something different please get over your cynicism about politics, and do something by voting Green, and ending the gridlock in our government, hospitals, roads, courts and schools.

Police services board ponders paid policing

MIRIAM KING
Innisfil Examiner

Community events, parades and fundraisers won't have to pay for policing service in 2014.

But in 2015, some event organizers will be asked to pay at least a portion of the cost of providing uniformed officers and police cruisers for their activities.

In 2013, the South Simcoe Police Service were present at 33 community events, providing security, enforcing road closures, or providing an escort. While volunteer auxiliary officers provided much of the police presence, the events still resulted in about 360 hours of overtime for uniformed officers, at a cost of $15,372, plus vehicle costs.

The estimated total cost to the police service for providing unpaid policing was $23,257 last year.

With the number of events increasing, and availability of auxiliaries declining, the police service has been exploring models that would allow at least partial cost recovery. At present, some events — like Summerfest in Innisfil and Carrotfest in Bradford — already hire paid duty officers to provide security. A recent report looked at extending that model to other events.

Bradford West Gwillimbury-Innisfil Police Services Board considered three options on Monday: the status quo, with the service absorbing all costs; a full cost-recovery model that would bill all events $63 per hour for a uniformed officer (four hour minimum), $30 per hour for a vehicle, plus a $100 permit fee; and a partial cost recovery model.

The partial cost recovery model would exempt community events, festivals and carnivals open to the public at no cost, religious festivals, parades, and town-sponsored events but charge for police presence at events where alcohol is sold, or a fee is charged to attend, whether for financial gain or charity.

Under this 'blended' model, 22 events would still receive free policing but 11 would be asked to pay the full or partial cost of policing.

The full cost recovery model would generate an estimated $26,257 in revenues; the partial recovery model would generate about $8,746.

The board opted to implement the partial recovery model starting in 2015. Innisfil Mayor Barb Baguley noted that there could be some push-back from charging charity events like the Heart & Stroke Foundation's Big Bike for Stroke or a Cancer Ride for the full cost of policing but pointed out that the charities pay other expenses.

"We pay for everything else. Health and safety should be the first concern. Pay the peace officers to keep the people safe while participating in the event," Baguley said. "Big Bike pays elsewhere. Why shouldn't they pay here?"

South Simcoe police will be contacting organizers of the 11 events listed for full or partial cost-recovery to discuss the decision of the board, and the future impact.

Baguley noted that the municipalities can provide relief for an event, either by declaring it as town-sponsored or by providing a grant to cover the cost of policing.

Slated for partial cost recovery are Summerfest, Carrotfest and the Innisfil Celtic Festival. Paying the full cost would be the Electronic Park EDM Music Festival in Cookstown, Big Bike for Stroke, Bradford Ribfest, and a number of charity bike rides and walks.

Progressive Conservative Julia Munro responds red tape, and an emphasis on building infrastructure, such as commercial highways. I was proud to be the first candidate in this riding to sign the Growing Ontario pledge put forward by the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, and believe that agriculture is one of the most important economic drivers in this province.

How would your party address the issue of rising tuition fees?

As tuition rates continue to rise, it has never been more important to create a thriving jobs market, to ensure students have the right education for the jobs available. A graduate needs the reassurance that when they complete their education, they will be able to get the job they have worked for. Additionally, the PC Party would lower income taxes by 10% after balancing the budget, which would allow students to pay off their debts more rapidly.

What would you do to address the issue of gridlock, and ease the commute for residents?

The PC Party has a comprehensive plan to have the government co-ordinate and plan transit within the GTA and 905, in addition to taking control of all rail-based transit in the province. An integrated system operated by a PC government would provide a seamless approach to transit in this province. We also plan to create 2-way, all-day GO Train service, which should significantly reduce gridlock. All of this will be done using a dedicated $12 billion transit fund, while balancing the budget.

What do you see as a key issue in York Simcoe?

There are many key issues in York-Simcoe, such as balancing the needs of the natural environment with man-made growth. We must focus on integrating our parks and green space with our Urban areas, and promote growth while preserving as much nature as we can. It is also important that we strive to protect agricultural lands, and respect the needs of the agricultural sector. All of these priorities must be balanced with job creation, so that we may continue to have a riding we can be proud of, over both the short and long term.

Tips for a successful open house

(NC) Hosting an open house is a valuable exercise in the home selling process, so it is important to do it right, says Costa Pouloupoulos, president of the Ontario Real Estate Association. "Just as visitors are expected to follow certain etiquette when entering an open house, hosts of open houses have their own set of rules to follow."

To leave a good impression with visitors, Pouloupoulos recommends the following tips to homeowners hosting an open house:

Leave: Visitors won't feel as comfortable exploring the home with you present. If you can't leave, try to be as inconspicuous as possible to give visitors an opportunity to experience the home.

No pets: Cats, dogs and other animals should be out of the house and any pet smells should be eliminated as much as possible. Any visible cages and pet dishes should appear spotless.

Keep it clean: A clean home suggests that the home is well cared for.

Clear the drive: Give your visitors somewhere to park, especially if street parking is not available or hard to come by.

Kids can garden too

(NC) Gardening is a great activity for families to spend time together during the warm summer months. It gets children away from television and video games – and gives them some exercise while learning about nature in the great outdoors.

Peter Cantley, a garden guru for the President's Choicebrand has more than 46 years of experience in his field. Peter is also the vice-president of floral and garden at Loblaw Companies Limited, so take a look at the tips he offers to give everyone in your family a green thumb:

Weeding and planting is an easy activity to get them started, and it's okay if they get a bit messy. Kids can join parents in the garden by digging in the soil with a small spade and finding roots and worms. If your child is old enough, let them learn ownership and responsibility by giving them a plant or part of the garden to water and help care for over the season. If they are really taking an interest, why not give them their own plant to grow? Try the lineup of PC Gigan-tico plants which make it easy for anyone to have large, lush-looking plants immediately.

dening. Bring a gift of fresh produce grown right in your garden when visiting friends and family as a thoughtful gift the kids can be proud to give.

Teach them to 'go green'.
Why not start with the Garden Centre Recycled Pot Program? It encourages gardeners to 'go green' by returning empty plastic pots and flats to their local Real Canadian Superstore in return for a coupon.

Most importantly – have fun. We only have the summer for a short time, so let's make the most of it.

Kids love getting dirty.

MOVE WITH MARGO

Is your home alone?

(NC)—Your bags are packed, the car is loaded and your tickets are in hand. You're finally ready for that relaxing summer getaway you've been anticipating all year...or so you think.

In the last minute hustle and bustle of planning a vacation, many Canadians leave their "home alone" and fail to plan for its proper protection. Empty houses are attractive targets for break-ins, which can be a real threat for homeowners.

"Planning ahead is essential to ensure that your return home doesn't leave you with unwelcome surprises," says Wayne Ross, an insurance expert at Aviva Canada. "The key is to take a few simple steps to make it look like you haven't left at all."

Consider the following tips the next time you are traveling for an extended period of time:

- Keep it to yourself. You or your kids posting holiday plans or live updates on social networking sites such as Facebook or Twitter may seem harmless enough, but it could alert would-be thieves to an empty house.

- Get a house sitter. Have someone stay there or have a trusted neighbour check-in daily. Give this person a key - don't hide it.

- Set timers. Set lights on timers in different rooms of your home.

- Newspaper and mail delivery. Piled up mail or newspapers are an obvious giveaway that the homeowners are out of town - cancel or temporarily divert deliveries, or have your neighbours pick them up in a timely fashion.

- Arrange for yard maintenance. Depending on the time of year, arrange to have your lawn mowed and your grass watered.

With these tips in mind, you can concentrate on enjoying your summer escape and coming back revitalized to your home. More information is available from your insurance broker or at avivacanada.com.

'Sandwich generation' caregivers get peace of mind

(NC) – They're called the "sandwich generation" working adults who have taken on the role of caring for an aging or ill parent while still raising their own children and pursuing a career. Membership to this group is growing every year as the Canadian population ages.

In fact, according to Statistics Canada, more than 2 million Canadians, mostly women between 35 and 44 years old, are "sandwiched" between caring for their young children and aging parents at the same time.

This can sometimes mean their resources, both mental and physical, are spread too thin which can also lead to worry and guilt when it comes time to leave the senior home alone.

Part of the worry is for potential medical emergencies or falls that could occur since seniors are at a much greater risk of falling. According to Health Canada every year, one in three seniors will fall at least once and falls account for more than half of all injuries among Canadians 65 years and over.

These were some of the concerns sandwich generation member Lisa Fazari of Richmond Hill, Ontario had as she looked for solutions to help care for her 83-year-old mother Ursula Calderon while also caring for her teen-age daughters.

Fazari's mother's activity level had decreased dramatically since the Osteoarthritis in her legs caused her to slow down and be more cautious, yet she was adamant that giving up her independence of living alone wasn't an option.

"My concern for my mom living on her own was the fact that even though she's aging she's very determined to live independently, she loves to maintain her regular routine and do her own thing," explained Fazari. "But the fact is, she can have an accident any time and I'm very concerned that nobody would reach her fast enough to help her out should she fall."

So Lisa looked into LifeCall, a personal medical alert device to help give her and her family the peace of mind they need to know her mother will be assisted if ever she experiences a medical emergency while home alone.

LifeCall, a division of Reliance Protectron Security Services, can assist seniors or those who are physically or chronically ill. It can be worn as a bracelet or as a pendant.

Coupled with the two-way voice communicator that is installed in Calderon's home, Fazari now has the assurance that comes with knowing her mother will receive emergency assistance in a timely manner if necessary and that she will be notified.

"The key features that I love about LifeCall are the panic button and its ability to determine if she's fallen or not. It's the solution that we've been looking for- for a long time," she added. The device features a built-in panic button as well as an optional intelligent pendant with fall detection.

As an additional layer of protection, the fall detection option works by sensing a sudden vertical acceleration. A short delay following a fall allows the person to cancel the alarm if they can recover. If the fall alarm is not cancelled and help is needed, the individual is immediately connected with an operator in the monitoring centre. More information about senior safety at home is available at lifecall.ca.

Reflecting your lifestyle.

Don't let unwanted pests crash your patio party

(NC) — Summer is a season for gathering with friends and family and for enjoying the great outdoors. Don't be surprised, however, if pests arrive uninvited.

Warming temperatures lead to all kinds of eco-activity and according to the experts at leading pest control company, Orkin Canada, the most likely pests you'll encounter this summer are ants, mosquitos, stinging pests, ticks and rodents.

"Most people are aware of the risks posed by mosquitos, bees, wasps and ticks, but they think that ants are simply a nuisance," says Alice Sinia, Ph.D., the resident entomologist for Orkin. "The reality is that ants are the nation's number one pest problem."

Sinia offers this helpful guideline:

Ants

There are more than 47 different species of in Canada, ranging from carpenter ants (which are the most populous species capable of major structural damage) to European fire ants, whose painful bites can cause serious allergic reactions and can kill small mammals.

As with most pests, the best way to deter ants is to limit their access to nesting sites, food and water. Clean up spilled food and drinks immediately, and keep food stored in air-tight containers, especially during outdoor picnics. Once ants find a food source, they leave behind an invisible pheromone trail for others to follow. Check your home's foundation for cracks and seal any openings, paying pay close attention to doors and windows. It is also important to check your attic and crawl spaces for leaks and condensation. Finally, don't forget overgrown tree branches and bushes brushing against your home since they provide "highways" for the ants.

Mosquitoes

These are one of the most dangerous pests and experts predict increased populations this summer due to the unusually high amount of snow during the past winter. Not only are mosquitoes annoying due to their constant presence, buzzing sounds and irritating bites, but they can also transmit diseases, including West Nile virus, malaria and yellow fever. To keep these pests at bay, always apply appropriately registered insect repellent before heading outdoors, especially at dawn and dusk when they are most active. Always read the label of insecticide repellent prior to use. Mosquitoes breed in stagnant water, regardless of size or amount. To help reduce activity around your home, get rid of any standing water and dense vegetation.

Bees and Wasps

Stings from these flying pests can cause anything from a minor irritation to severe allergic reactions. They are beneficial insects and typically do not sting unless provoked, so try to remain calm if they are flying around you. Frequently inspect for nests around your home and in empty garbage cans. Look for wax cells, sometimes papery or made of clay or mud and they may be located in wall voids, under slabs, along eaves, or in soil. Position flowering plants away from places you frequent, such as doorways, walkways, decks and mailboxes.

Ticks and Rodents

Not as common around the home, ticks are more prevalent in woodlands, fields, and in areas with shrubbery and tall grass. Experts suggest maintaining a well-kept yard, especially along the edges of your property. When venturing out into nature, wear long-sleeved shirts and light coloured pants so you can easily spot these bloodsucking pests. The primary hosts of ticks are small mammals, particularly rodents. Therefore, it is advisable to have a rodent control program in place for your backyard if your home is in a heavily wooded or densely vegetated area. Ticks pose health risks to both humans and pets, so check your pets frequently and consult with your veterinarian about tick prevention treatments.

. These tips will help ensure that pests don't crash your backyard barbecue, and stay out of your home. If you suspect that you already have an infestation, you should contact your local pest control professional immediately.

Remote home monitoring

(NC)— Summer is finally upon us and it's time to take advantage of the heat and sunshine to get away on a family vacation. Whether it's waterskiing on your favorite lake, or roasting some marshmallows around a campfire, you'll want to make sure that you are still connected to your home while you're away to ensure all is safe and secure.

According to Patrice De Luca, V.P. of Marketing and Customer Care for Reliance Protectron Security Services, the latest advancements in home security systems are leaving homeowners with a greater sense of peace of mind that their home is being protected while they're away. This is due to the latest interactive services from providers like Reliance Protectron that is giving clients protection that goes far beyond the role of a traditional home security system. Here are some of the interactive tools now available:

Video Surveillance

You can set up video surveillance around your property and in your home that seamlessly sleeves into your existing system. You can subscribe to interactive video surveillance to record activity at preset times or begin recording when motion is detected. "Only you can monitor what's happening in your house through your webcams, as our monitoring centres cannot access your cameras," explained De Luca. Thus, you can for example make sure you kids arrived home safely, even if you're not home.

Interactive Door Locks

If you have guests that will be house-sitting or getting your mail for you while you are away, there is no need to give them a key. You can give them a pass-code to unlock your door which you can change or delete immediately upon your return from vacation.

Interactive Thermostat

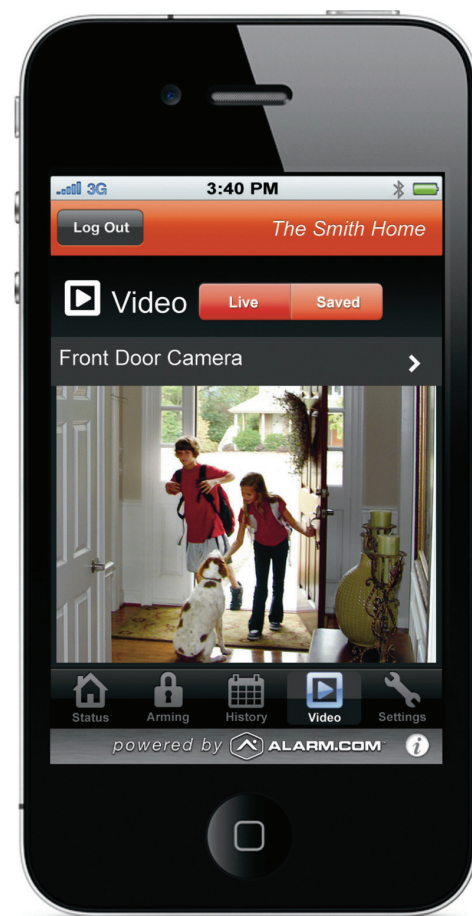

You no longer have to worry if you left the air conditioning on or not before you leave the house. You can simply check the status of your thermostat through your computer or your smartphone and turn it off if you forgot. As an added bonus, you can turn it on just before you get back if you are returning home on a particularly hot day.

Remote Control Lighting and Appliances

You can also control appliances and your lighting remotely using the same interactive technology, so you can make sure appliances are shut off and make it look like someone is home by switching lights on and off in the evening. All this control is accessible by logging in to your myprotectron.com account from your personal computer, BlackBerry, Android, iPhone app or any web-enabled device. More information on protecting your home on the go is available online at www.protectron.com.

Astronaut at Georgian College

IAN MCINROY Innisfil Examiner

Canadian astronaut Chris Hadfield addresses the crowd at Georgian College last Friday morning during a speech that detailed his adventures in space and other inspirational observations on life.

IAN MCINROY
Innisfil Examiner

Canada's — and perhaps the world's — most famous astronaut landed at Georgian College last Friday.

Col. Chris Hadfield's appearance was in conjunction with the Advancing Learning conference being held at the Barrie campus and a morning speech to approximately 1,000 people was a sell out.

Those lucky enough to attend — conference participants, students, staff, faculty, college supporters and community members — heard stories about life in space, how precious our planet is and how our dreams can become reality.

In the afternoon, he spoke to Grade 6 students at a presentation organized by the Simcoe County District School Board.

Hadfield was the first astronaut to stretch the use of social media to the limit while floating in space, and he didn't waste anytime checking in with his Twitter account prior to his events at the college.

"Speaking twice today with thousands of students at Georgian College. Looking forward to the questions/thoughts afterwards: the best part," he tweeted.

In the spirit of his love of sharing knowledge and his experiences — and Georgian's videoconferencing technology — his presentations reached approximately 10,000 people across the college's seven campus communities in Barrie, Orillia, Midland, Muskoka, Orangeville, South Georgian Bay and Owen Sound.

Hadfield, who retired a year ago — ending a 35-year career as a military pilot and an astronaut — has spent 166 days in orbit, almost 15 hours walking in space, has flown two shuttle missions (1995 and 2001), gone to space on a Russian rocket to the International Space Station (ISS) in December 2012 and in March 2013 became commander of the ISS until his return to Earth in May 2013.

He is an avid skier, author — An Astronaut's Guide to Life on Earth is a bestseller and he has another book of photographs from space coming out later this year — and skilled musician. He'll be performing a suite of music he wrote while aboard the ISS with the Windsor Symphony this fall.

His rendition of David Bowie's Space Oddity — sung while circling the Earth in the ISS — was a social-media sensation and he brought his musical prowess to the college Thursday night when he dropped in unannounced to jam with his brother, Dave.

Hadfield told the crowd achieving the impossible is not an out-of-this-world concept.

"Education, enabling technology, how we organize ourselves on an individual level: these help us get the impossible done," he said. "How we visualize failure is just as important as how we visualize our success."

Andrew Arkwell, a third-year student in the college's computer programmer/analyst course, said Hadfield offered a different perspective on life.

"He is a really inspirational guy in the stories he told and the way he talks about his experiences and how vast our world really is. He seemed like a guy who was prepared for any scenario," he said.

"His message relates well to any career path or aspiration you have. No matter what pursuit you're considering, if you want to choose something to do, then go for it. Pursue your goals."

With more than a million people watching his videos and following him on Twitter, Hadfield showcased the power of social media, Arkwell said.

"It's amazing to see how it can be used for such a broad audience and the snowball effect it can have on our society," he said.

Hadfield said his videos and tweets from space reflected what the multinational team of astronauts were doing and how they were feeling.

"I tried constantly in the videos I made or with the Twitter feed — whenever there was something funny or humorous — to share it with people," he said. "We made about 100 videos with the CSA when we were on the space station and the necessity to see what's happening from a human point of view is key."

"We left Earth 13 years ago (for the ISS), we're building a new place and the humanity of it, the beauty of it and the humour of it is important. You play pranks and always look for a way to really, truly enjoy what's going on," he added.

"It's not a time to be all reserved. It's a time to have a good time, and we really did."

Now that he's back on Earth and recovering from his time in orbit, he'll be taking on a three-year term as professor at the University of Waterloo in its aviation programs as well as doing research into astronaut health.

And he'll continue with his inspirational speaking engagements.

"I'm changing peoples' minds about how they make decisions," he said.

"It's important for people to ask what's going on and why, and how it affects them."
